

INT. MONTANA HOME - NIGHT

Corinne lectures her insolent daughter Jill. She's just caught Jill outside, breaking the rules of the nationwide lockdown.

CORINNE
You COULD HAVE DIED!

JILL
But I am, plainly, alive! Isn't that great?

CORINNE JILL.

JILL
Okay, okay. I'm sorry. But really, Mom -- there's barely anyone out here! There's a whole FOREST separating us and J...

She catches herself.

JILL (CONT'D)
The next house over! I went for a walk, took a breather--

CORINNE
Next time you need to get your blood pumping, watch Suze's Weightroom like a normal person, Jill. This is NOT okay. You're LUCKY to not have caught it in Chicago, especially with your father--

JILL
Don't worry about it, okay? I'm fine, I'm home, I'm safe.
(then)
And I'm sorry. Let me make you dinner to make up for it.

Jill's mother, too worn from worry, caves.

CORINNE
Generous offer, but you know I already made you a giant lasagna.

She puts a few plates down. Jill digs in.

JILL
I love you.

CORINNE

The next time you leave this house
without me knowing young lady,
you're dead meat.

JILL

Yum, is that what you put in the lasagna?

CORINNE

Secret ingredient.

They laugh.
